American Opportunity Credit can include qualified tuition and related expenses. Related expenses include charges and fees associated with books, supplies, and equipment only if the fee must be paid to the eligible educational institution as a condition of the enrollment or attendance. Costs associated with room and board; insurance; medical expenses (including student health fees); transportation and similar personal, living or family expenses are not qualified tuition and related expenses.

Beginning in 2018, Section 529 Plan distributions up to $10,000 per year per student can be used for elementary and high school expenses including homeschooling. Expenses paid with Section 529 Distributions cannot be used for Wisconsin Private School Tuition credit.

Beginning in 2019 Section 529 Plan distributions up to $10,000 lifetime limit per student may be used to pay student loans. Any student loan interest paid with tax-free Section 529 plan earnings is not eligible for student loan interest deduction.
